

Week 20 – Results from the Muck and Miry Run

GoTT,

The plot continues to thicken at the top of the box for the OOM. The dog days of August are on us and with vacations abound and attendance down points are out there to be had. The yawning gap between 1 and 2, once over double digits, is now down to a measly 5 points as the defending champion is not going down without a fight this year. In recent campaigns the past Champion, having expended the energy of a Championship season, has rarely been in contention in July, let alone making an August run. Little Buddy is having none of it. LB shoots a sweet 89 (among his best scores ever) to notch the top spot in a week that saw just 14 podium eligible rounds. LB's handicap took a nice little hit in this weeks revision as a result, but he has been here before and something tells me he will be here till the the end.

Second place went to MG, who had not been happy with his recent outings leading up to the Miry Run event... In fact I don't think he'd ever even seen the track, so nice one there as he racks up the 2 bonus points for second place with a tidy 83 net 67. Third place went to Matt D, in his first round on tour in a month after his victory at the Makefield Classic. Sadly he has racked up more points than most of us who have been our regularly in that time. Matt shot a 91 net 68 to round out the podium.

Hard luck 4th went to Mullet who has seemed to spend much of the season in the top 10 in scoring at each event but has come up just short a few more times than he would like. He remains in 3rd in the order however just 9 points back of the leader and is playing more than once this week yet again (Oh to be semi-semi- retired).

Those are your results for the Run at Miry. Middletown week is well under way and our OOM leader has already posted a number to beat. Good luck to everyone this week.
