

Week 8 – The Desecration of the Old Course

GoTT,

It's rare that I don't have to look back to confirm that lifetime or modern era records have been set in a given week, but this week there was absolutely no need to refer to our history at all. It would seem that the combination of the Heather Mills McCartney matchplay hangover, along with several Champion's League 4-Ball Comps becoming the focus rather than stroke play led to the worst single week overall scoring performance by the participants since we went to the current format. Unfortunately I'm pretty sure it wasn't even close. With 2 guys taking the podium with net 76s, and 3 guys shooting worse than NET 88 scoring was nothing short of abysmal. As a result I am forced to merely recognize the venerable one, Tim-E-Way on his first victory of the 2011 campaign and his second career win. Guess where his other win was? Yep, MOW. Tim shot a tidy 79 not 69 and absolutely lapped the field. In fact I was considering holding the bonus points back after Tim, but alas the rules simply don't allow it. As a result Eduardo and Bruni finished in a tie for 2nd with net 76's. Oh what most of us would give for bonus points at 4 over net... Congrats boys.

Now one note on the bonus points for Bruni. He actually was eligible last week for full membership as MG and Rainman were and I missed it. He made the request so I am assuming he will clear waivers this week and get full membership and as a result have awarded him the bonus points he deserves. Full members look for a separate message on that front later.

Also look this weekend for an update on Champion's league play as we are just 2 matches short of finishing the first round on time. Nice job men!!!

Good luck to all as we head to Makefield Highlands for the first time this season. Here is hoping Pee-tah, The Sheriff, and Paul M don't play this poorly 2 weeks in a row... Those were some tough numbers boys!!!
